

In 2003, the University of Nairobi senate ratified the change of name of the Department and the degree program to Environmental and Biosystems engineering to reflect the content and intent of the Department's academic, research and consultancy services and to keep in tune with the expanding global challenges and demands.